Changes to Southern Access to Union Station

What's Changing

City of Toronto Replacing Southern Ramp near Bremner Blvd.

- For about three months, City of Toronto construction may affect the way you normally travel in and out of Union Station, if you use the southern entrance between the Air Canada Centre and the Telus Tower off of Bremner Blvd.
- The City of Toronto will be demolishing the current ramp leading up and replacing it with one leading down to the future food and retail level below, which will include access to GO Concourses, VIA and TTC services via stairs, elevators and escalators
- Half of the ramp will remain open while the other side is under construction

Be Aware. Take Care

- Stairwells and walkways may be more crowded than usual, so you may need to change your usual route. Look for signage to help you find your way
- For your safety, please do not block walkways, stairwells or doorways, and do not stop at the bottom or top of escalators. Please make way for customers with mobility needs as this area will be more crowded than usual
